applicants according to Jack Campbell, chairman of the grants committee. Campbell and all foundation members present at the awards ceremony, held at Orfila Vineyards, were ecstatic at the success of the program. "We've exceeded our expectations," said Campbell.

"Our donation targets seemed ambitious when we first set them up, but we made it," said Campbell, explaining that the foundation will put at least half of its yearly donations into an endowment fund. "I think this has staying power and growing power."

The brainchild of local businessman and investor John "Jack" Raymond, the group is comprised of successful businessmen and women from a broad spectrum of experience, all of whom are anxious to encourage Escondido area agencies and youth to grow with the community.

More than 100 organizations have agreed to donate at least $1,000 per year for the first five years, and larger lump-sum donations of $25,000 each from the city and county and $10,000 from the Escondido Rotary Club.

Chairman Ken Lounsbery said the foundation has extremely low overhead costs because it is an affiliate of the San Diego Foundation, which handles virtually all of the administrative work.

"Every penny goes to charity," he said.

For information on the Escondido Charitable Foundation, as well as other North County foundation opportunities, contact Heather H. Dugdale, Regional Manager, North County Inland for The e San Diego Foundation by phone at 858.385-1595.
